CITY AND COUNTY

Mrs. O. P. Badger is convalescent after a severe attack of typhoid malarial fever.

W. G. Neff is trying the efficacy of the Terre Haute artesian baths as a cure for rheumatism.

Mr. R. W. Crawley had his eye seriously injured and his face cut by being struck in the face by a piece of heavy wire thrown with great force.

Two students annoyed the quiet and peaceful citizens adjacent to College Avenue Church, last Wednesday night, about twelve o'clock, by quarreling and using language that would be foul even the mouth of a buzzard. Names next time.

The Terre Haute Mail says: Jerome Hill, the cornetist of the Ring-gold Band, has set to music a new song and chorus, written by E. Spears, of this city, entitled, "Let me see you smile again." It is a composition of decided merit.

Mr. Chas. McKee and wife, of Indianapolis, were down to attend the wedding of Miss Emma Beck, the first of the week.

It is said that the South End has a number of amateur coal dealers. Recently one of them, who was never known to buy a bushel of coal in his life, sold $10 worth to a neighbor—"small sales and quick profits."

Will Murphy hasn't gone to Cloverdale for some time, nor has he gone to Lima for one thing or another, consequently we can't say anything about him this week.

Pat. Halloran was over from Cincinnati to see his girl this week.

Dr. Jas. Milligan, of Lena, visited relatives here this week.

In the death of Mrs. Jas. White the Blue Ribbon Club has lost one of its most earnest workers.

The temperance meeting Wednesday night was not well attended, and an early adjournment was had. Warm weather always has a bad effect on temperance meetings. There was an election of officers at the last meeting. George Long was chosen president, and the remainder of the officers were filled with others "too numerous to mention."

Harry Sage and Chas. Martin visited Carbon Wednesday.

Chas. Meckler is the champion dog exterminator of the North End.

A new amateur telegraph company has been organized—Daggy, Sage & Tuck. The line will extend from the city office to Daggy's residence on north Locust street. The line is to be used for practice.

Asa Black is down from Indianapolis this week.

Harry Sage took in the ice cream and ginger snap party. He "took the cake"—the pound cake—as fast as the next one.

James Atkins has resigned the position of hackster for Dr. Rogers.

The wife of James Coverdale is just recovering from a severe attack of measles.

We had a pleasant visit from George Woolsey, of Crawfordsville, this week. He took some of Mrs. Priest's millinery with him.

"Reporter" was very kind in giving his advice to the belles. He should remember that a little recreation after the day's toil is over is as necessary as the toil is ever. Besides, the German concertina is a very nice musical instrument. It takes but little time and expense to learn to make music on it, and the music is as pleasant to listen to as that of the organ. Let him remember the law of nature, "live and let live." Girls, give Mrs. Maloney a call, as she teaches writing in all its branches, and gives lessons on the concertina.

THE GENERAL JUDGMENT.

The Other Side.

Review of sermon delivered in College Avenue Church by Rev. W. W. Curry, a short time since, by Elder O. P. Badger delivered in the Christian Church, this city, on May 8, 1881:

Dr. Curry affirmed—1st, that the judgment was inaugurated at the second coming of Christ. 2d, that the second coming of Christ was in the lifetime of the Apostles. Therefore, (3d) the judgment is now going on in the world. To sustain this theory the following scriptures were quoted: Psalm 105-7: He is the Lord our God; His judgments are in all the earth. Psalm 58-11: Verily, He is a God that judgeth in the earth. Prov. 11-31: Behold, the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth, much more the wicked and the sinner. Isaiah 42-1, 2, 3, 4: Behold, my servant whom I uphold, mine elect in whom my soul delighteth, I have put my spirit upon him. He shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the streets. A bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench: he shall bring forth judgment unto truth; he shall not fail nor be discouraged till he have set judgment in the earth. Jer. 23-5: Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous branch; a king shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment in the earth.

All the foregoing Scriptures go to prove that the present is the time of judgment, as applied by Dr. Curry.

It will be apparent to all that these proofs refer generally to the coming of Christ, and that in them the fact is clearly taught, and that at that coming he was to establish judgment in the earth. But in the New Testament Scriptures there is brought to view another judgment yet in the future, and just as clearly taught as is this one. To make the present the day of final judgment is to utterly ignore all the Scriptures which teach a future general judgment, and thus compel the Holy Spirit to stultify himself in the most positive and point-blank contradictions. While the view we sustain makes all the Scriptures clear, and, best of all, gives a perfect harmony to the teachings of the Old and New Testaments.

We ask, then, what is the nature and character of the judgment taught by these Old Testament proofs? David, in the 10th Psalm and 9th verse, says: The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether; more to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold; sweeter also than honey and the honey comb. Moreover by them is Thy servant warned, and in keeping of them there is great reward. Here it is plainly declared that the judgments now in the earth are truth, justice and mercy—the abundant proofs of His goodness in the gift of His providences and His precepts, submitted by the Divine, to, and for, the guidance of humanity—something to be kept, and done, and enjoyed, and not something to be endured and suffered. Psalm 105-1: I will sing of Thy mercy and of Thy judgments. Hosia, 12-6: God said to Israel, turn thou to the Lord and keep mercy and judgment, and wait on the Lord continually. Thus the people were to be the custodians of God's judgments. But judgment is also in the heavens as well as on the earth. David says: Justice and judgment are the habitation of Thy throne. All these go to show the nature of God's judgments on earth.

But we come now to another and a very different class of Scriptures. And 1st Eccl. 12-14: For God shall bring every work to judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil. Not "does bring;" not "is bringing;" but "will bring."

John 5-22: The Father hath committed all judgment to the Son; that all men should honor the Son even as they honor the Father. But when will He begin to use this authority? 2d Tim. 4-1: He shall judge the quick (living) and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom. Again, Jesus says: For judgment I am come into this world, that they which see might be made blind, and that they which see not may see. The object of this particular judgment, then, was not to send men from the death-bed right off to heaven or to hell, but to give sight to the morally blind, and convict the hypocrites and religious bigots of their moral corruptions. Christ said to the Apostles, in reference to the gift of the Holy Spirit: When He is come, He will convict the work of judgment. In reference to this judgment, Paul reasoned before Felix of the judgment to come, and he trembled. See the strange contrast: About the first David sang joyfully;—in reference to the other, the king trembled on his throne. Acts, 24-25.

Rom. 14-20: For we shall stand before the judgment seat of Christ. For what? 2d Cor. 5-10—that every one may receive the things done in the body—good or evil. Heb. 9-27: But after this the judgment. After what? After we sin? No, no; but after death. Does this look like men are judged and rewarded in this life for their good or evil doings? Surely not—it cannot be. Matt. 12-41: The men of Nineveh shall rise up in judgment with this generation and condemn it, for they repented at the preaching of Jona, and behold, a greater than Jona is here. Has this test ever been made yet? Surely not. Heb. 10-26 to 31: If we sin willfully after we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remains no more sacrifice for sin, but a certain, fearful looking for of judgment and a certain, fearful looking for of judgment, &c. But is it now, or in the future? It is at the last day. How many last days are there? There can be but one. 2d Thess. 1-7 to 10: And to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven in flaming fire, with His mighty angels, taking vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and glory of His power, when He shall come to be glorified in his saints and to be admired by all them that believe in that day: Phil. 3-20 and 21: We look for the Lord Jesus, who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto His own glorious body. We ask, at what period in the Gospel's history has this ever been done? If never, then the dead are not raised, and if the dead are not raised, they have not yet been judged. The day of a general judgment is, in the divine economy, a necessity.

The turpitude of human crime is not weighed in the scales that many seem to suppose. Man is responsible not only for his doings as they may affect his own moral and religious status, but for such doings as they may affect the condition of his fellow men. This puts off the day of a final reckoning till the end of time. For all men leave behind them a record of good or evil, that like the wave started in mid-ocean by the pebble dropped in the water, it rolls on and on, till it at last breaks on the banks of eternity.

Think of the influence of a Calvin, a Luther, a Wesley, or a Campbell, and on the other side, a Volney, a Voltaire, or a Payne.

Dr. Curry gravely said: If the evangelical churches find Scriptures that they may think do not agree with our position, one of two things must be true—they are guilty of making the Bible contradict itself, or else they are wrong in their interpretations.

Bold, but specious, this. Have we not quite as good a right to say that if you shall find Scriptures which do not agree with the interpretations we set upon them, and therefore differ with us, you are either guilty of making the Bible a book of contradictions, or else fail to properly interpret such passages.

Our review is but half done, but this article, already too long, must here close, to be continued in our next issue.

Reelsville.

The farmers are busy plowing and planting corn.

Wheat is growing very fast—prospect is good for a fine crop.

Business in general is good in this part of the county.

Some excitement has arisen in regard to the proposed tax for the new railroad.

Mr. Spelbring, of Poland, shipped a car-load of cattle to Indianapolis last week.

Dr. S. A. Hinton is attending medical association in Virginia.

Ross & Hinton have their new storehouse nearly completed.

We had quite a strange wedding to occur in town on Saturday night. Mr. Thos. Hatcher and Miss Lou Barnett decided that they would unite in the solemn bonds of matrimony, and called on "Squire Gorton at the late hour of one o'clock in the night to solemnize the marriage. There is something peculiar about this. Can any town in the county beat it for a wedding at this hour?

Mr. J. Pierson and Wm. Foster are the two boss squirrel hunters of this township. They faithfully put in a whole day shooting squirrels, and came home late in the evening loaded down with one squirrel. Try it again, boys.

We again relate the sad news that death has visited our esteemed friend, Thomas Mathes, and called him away from our midst on the 6th of May. He was deposited in the cemetery at Reelsville, Elder Brinton Wright delivering an eloquent funeral discourse. The funeral was largely attended. Mr. Mathes was a very useful man, a good neighbor, and was beloved by all. He leaves a wife and two small boys to mourn his loss. We deeply sympathize with them in their sad bereavement.

Another Entertaining Letter From "Rome."

SOCORRO, N. M., May 1, 1881.

EDITOR STAR:

Since my last, emigration has been steadily increasing to this part of the Territory. The rich strikes in the mining districts contiguous to Socorro accounts for the tidal wave rolling in at this place. The latest boom is in the Magdalena Mountains, 30 miles west of here.
A short time ago work was begun on the "Iron Mash," owned by Toledo, Ohio, parties, and at a depth of 30 or 40 feet ore was struck that assays from 20,000 to 25,000 ounces of silver to the ton. In the Magallon Mts., 175 miles west, ore has been discovered that runs 1,700 to the ton, not in little chunks of rock, but solid masses weighing 50 or 60 lbs each.
The Homestake Mine, in the White Oaks district, 70 miles southeast of here, is probably one of the richest gold mines in the world. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been offered for a mere interest in this bonanza, but refused. The owners do not care to sell at any price.

Central and Southern New Mexico
will prove to be the great mining district of the world. Mineral ledges crop out on every mountain. Even from Socorro the copper stain can be seen on the Socorro Mts., 4 miles distant, of varied hues, presenting a fine sight.

But it must not be supposed that the valuable minerals can be extracted, reduced to the pure metal, without hard labor, many hardships, disappointments and a great expense. To successfully develop the mines a great outlay of capital, expensive machinery, energy and pluck are required. The most a poor prospector can do is to locate his claim, work out his assessment, 20 days, and patiently wait for a buyer. If he strikes good mining ore his chances for a quick sale at good figures are good. Seventy-five percent of the prospectors are poor. I have met numbers of prospectors who have mined nearly all their lives, have been rich, then poor, and so on, up and down, yet pursuing the glittering idol till old age comes and soon death. In pursuit of the precious metal they have undergone the severest hardships, have had to fight Indians, contend with wild beasts, endure hunger and thirst, and yet were buoyed up by hope—divine hope! Indeed, hope is the miner's bread and meat.
It keeps him alive when the ravages of hunger tempt him to destruction,
and his slumbers are full of roscate dreams of the dear ones at home surrounded by luxuries, and he in their midst resting from the turmoil of life,
enjoying with a keen relish the happiness surrounding him, and happy in the thought that struggle and deprivation are at an end. Bright vision, but seldom realized.

We are on the eve of a great development of the resources of this Territory.
Capital, as soon as assured of profitable investment, is coming in rapidly. We have the most agreeable climate, the greatest natural resources—water, grass and wood—while many large veins of anthracite coal, in various parts of the country, have been discovered, and are now being rapidly developed. The soil of the Rio Grande Valley is of a rich,
sandy loam, exceedingly fertile, but requires irrigation. With intelligent tillage all kinds of grain, fruits, &c., can be successfully grown.

The Mexicans here are a century behind the times. Wheat is piled on the ground, a number of goats kept moving over it, back and forth, round and round,
and this constitutes their threshing machine. Their old-fashioned water-mills have a capacity of about 12 bushels of grain in 24 hours. Their flour is coarse and their bread unpalatable.

Adobes (bricks) are made in the ancient Egyptian style. A cavity is made in the ground, a small stream of water conducted from the ditch to it, and when the hole is sufficiently full the stream is stopped. Into this they shovel loose dirt, and then throw in some finely chopped dry grass, and the ingredients are in. Then two or three Mexicans roll their pants above the knees and jump in,
and with their hoes soon reduce the mass
to the proper consistency. Two men with a flat hod then carry the mud to a smooth place on the ground and dump their load. The molder comes next,
his mold consisting of two rectangles 9x16 inches. The adobes are left on the ground, the only kiln being the warm rays of the sun. In two days the adobes are ready for laying.

Business is splendid—every house in town is having a lively trade. This is the out-fitting point for a number of mining camps whose trade is by no means small. Buildings are going up rapidly all over town; lots are selling fast at high prices; streets are being improved, and Socorro is fast losing her Mexican caste.
Shall be glad to answer any inquiries that may be directed to me relative to the country, &c. Respectfully,

R. B. DETRICK.

The wheat crop prospect looks favorable. But very small crop of oats sown in this locality, owing to the wet weather. Elder W. H. Williams had a very sick child, but it is better. . . .
Squire Rawley is very sick with lung fever. Miss Ellen Stokes came home from Danville on a visit the fore part of last week. The M. E.
Church has a new bell. Sunday-school dismissed at the Christian Church.
George Eaglesfield is running a huckster wagon. Dr. J. B. Grubb, from Bloomingdale, Ind., was on our streets last week. Miss Mattie Hamilton is convalescent. Drs. Grubb and Milligan performed a surgical operation on Mr. Murphy, just south of here, for dropsy, last Saturday. The work was performed with great credit to both physicians. Mr. Murphy is left in the care of Dr. Milligan, of this place.
Elder Colvin, of Danville, preached at the M. E. Church last Sabbath morning and evening, to a crowded house.
B. F. Bruner is again shipping staves to Terre Haute. Mr. Madison is on the sick list. Will Rawley, a Danville student, came home on Saturday to see his sick father. Andy Clark's daughter was married, on last Sabbath morning, to a gentleman from Harmony, Ind. We will have another wedding soon in this vicinity. . . .
Mr. Henry Butt has bought a farm and will make farming his future occupation. Cill Combs has a sick child. David Butt will go west for his health this month. L.W.

Madison Township.

Wheat is looking well. Farmers are busily engaged in plowing for corn. The grass is growing fast. . . .
There is a good prospect for all kinds of fruit except peaches in this locality. Marion Rice and Jacob Harlan, of Clinton township, are visiting relatives in this vicinity. Mr. Wm.
H. Hall is on the sick list. David King contemplates going to Iowa this fall. Mr. James Alsbaugh's wife

In Memoriam.

Suddenly came the alarm to the door of our Lodge, and the messenger whose name is Death has summoned from our presence to the Supreme Lodge above,
one of our members whose life was full of good works, and whose kind sympathy
was extended to all, especially the poor and needy. He who answered was our beloved brother, James W. Ewing, who departed this life April 19, 1881.

And we, the committee to whom was assigned the duty of preparing a tribute of respect to his memory, would respectfully submit the following:

That in the death of our deceased
brother we have lost a faithful and zealous Free Mason, a true and tried brother, a kind and hospitable citizen; that in this we sincerely manifest our sorrow to the family in their sad bereavement of husband and father, and tender to them
our warmest sympathy; that as Masons
we will honor his memory, emulate his virtues, and by zealous labor and steadfast faith, fill up the brief space which is called life. Wm. H. WHITE,

I suffered so much with rheumatism that my arm withered, and physicians could

I was instantly relieved, and, by the continued use of the Oil, entirely cured. I thank heaven for having used this wonderful remedy, for it saved my life. It also cured my wife.

Mr. Watkins is a Sacramento artist.
His most ambitious painting, a landscape
with cows, was sold by auction for $530,
and was elated at the price. The purchas-

The new law authorizing the election of women as school officers has no emergency clause, consequently it will not go into effect until the general distribution of the laws throughout the State.

The results of the new jury law and its workings are watched with interest, as it makes important changes in the manner of selecting jurors. Hereafter they will be drawn by two persons of opposite politics, selected for that special purpose, and called jury commissioners. The new system is expected to operate to the detriment of professional jurors, which in many places have become a great nuisance. A small tax is also put upon the luxury known as the right of trial by jury, it being provided that the losing party shall pay a jury fee of $4.50 to the county as part of the costs in the case.

GEORGE C. HARDING, of Indianapolis, is dead. Peace to his ashes. He joined the host beyond at 6:30 Sunday morning last. About ten days before he received a fall on Pennsylvania street, and sustained a severe injury, which confined him to his bed. Added to this, he was afflicted with erysipelas and troubled with his digestive organs, which led to his death. The deceased was the best known newspaper in the State, and was noted especially for that terse, pointed, brilliant and aggressive style of writing peculiarly his own. His loss will be keenly felt by the host of people who really enjoyed the fruits of his pen. The last newspaper venture of the deceased, The Saturday Review, in the publication of which he was associated with Mr. Chas. Dennis, has been unusually successful, and will be continued by the surviving partner.

The railroad meeting last Saturday developed nothing particularly new in regard to the project, save that a corps of surveyors would go to work next Monday, starting from this city, to run trial lines for the roadway. The position of our citizens in regard to the subsidy asked was talked over, and the truth came out when Judge Brown asserted that this township wanted the shops, and the donation could not be reached without them. Greencastle is not a mendicant, begging that a railroad be opened up to give her communication with the outside world. Few cities are better supplied with shipping and traveling facilities, but we are open to conviction that we need more. How badly we need them is a matter for serious consideration. It is questionable whether we can afford to give $60,000 and the right of way for the unknown benefits to be derived by securing one terminus of 85 miles of railroad. If, however, the gentlemen who build the road will guarantee the location and maintenance of the machine and repair shops in this township, the outlook is more favorable, and the issue would bear canvassing among the people.

INDIANA STATE NEWS.

During the past winter there were 1,717 persons in Whitley County of the proper age to attend school who were not enrolled.

An Indianapolis on the morning of the 1st Christopher Sutherland, a well-known citizen, developed insanity which took a dangerous form, and his family were compelled to flee for life. He was overpowered with difficulty and removed to the asylum. His insanity is attributed to domestic differences.

Some Evansville children were given gaster beans to plant, but ate them instead.

Six of the children became very sick, and were only saved from death by prompt medical assistance.

A circular to County Treasurers, issued a few days since, State Auditor Wolfe called the attention of those officials to a change in the settlement sheets about to be issued, by which the item for "printing and advertising" was stricken out; and announcement was at the same time made that no settlement sheets in which a deduction was made for printing and advertising (meaning the publication of the delinquent lists) would be accepted as in proper form. The ground upon which Colonel Wolfe took this action was that the cost of printing the delinquent list was properly chargeable to the county expenses, and ought not to be paid or allowed by the State; and that, in fact, only a few of the counties had ever made such deduction. A further reason was that he had information of an organized attempt being made to compel the State to refund to all of the counties in which no deduction had been made the amount to which they would have been entitled had such claims been made at the time the settlements were effected; and recognizing that a very serious raid might thus be made upon the Treasury of the State, the State Auditor took prompt steps to protect the interests of the State. Upon receipt of a claim from Kosciusko County for an allowance of $1,337.75 for the printing and advertising of the last two years, the matter was submitted to the Attorney-General, who furnished Colonel Wolfe with an opinion in which he held that so far from the counties which had failed to make the deduction being now entitled to prefer any claim against the State, the law more clearly indicated that the State could demand to be reimbursed by the counties in which such deduction for printing and advertising had been improperly allowed. By a reference to the records in his office, the State Auditor finds that in 1875 sixty-seven counties, and in 1879 seventy-two counties, failed to make any deduction, while in 1880 forty-nine of the ninety-two counties received no credit on account of this item. Basing his estimate upon the amount allowed where such deductions were made, he is of opinion that to make an allowance as claimed to all of the counties would take from the State Treasury at least $75,000, while probably a quarter of a million dollars would scarcely cover the back allowances if the State officers were to consent to place all the counties upon an equality in the matter.

By a law enacted by the late Legislature, the time for the reception of visitors at the Insane Asylum is restricted to week days between the hours of two and five o'clock.

The following is the law passed by the late Legislature for the protection of sheep:

SEC. 1. All who own or harbor dogs, shall by the 1st of May, each year, report the number to the township Trustees, who shall register them with number and description by sex, color and breed, and furnish for one dog a male and two for female a metallic tag with number on it, and the owner shall attach same to neck of each dog by a collar; for each dog more than one the owner shall pay two dollars for such metallic tags, and this money goes into a dog fund.

SEC. 2. Makes it unlawful for any dog to run at large without such tag and collar, and liable for any one to kill dogs at large without collars.

SEC. 3. Requires constables to proceed to kill all on and after 1st of May which are found without tags and collars as provided; on notice to any Trustee by any citizen that any dog is not so registered, and tagged, Trustee shall give notice to any constable to kill such dogs; and Trustee shall not make public the name of citizens giving him notice in such cases.

SEC. 4. Any constable failing to kill such dogs shall be fined $25 for each offense, he shall be paid fifty cents for each dog killed not as a reward, but for his services, to be paid out of the dog fund.

SEC. 5. All money accruing from such dog licenses, fines, etc., shall constitute a fund for the payment of damages sustained by the owners of sheep maimed or killed by dogs in each Township. No one shall receive pay for sheep maimed or killed by dogs owned by himself. All funds now on hand under the old law shall be added to this fund, and all pending claims for sheep killed, etc., shall be paid out of this fund.

C. S. HEATH committed suicide at Angola on the 7th, by hanging himself in his barn. Cause, ill health. His age was over seventy years.

SOME ten days ago Mr. George C. Harding, editor of the Indianapolis Saturday Review, in making way for some ladies near the post-office building, stepped upon a cellar grating just as a man underneath was lifting the door. In consequence he tripped and fell, injuring one of his lower limbs. Three days later the injury disabled him; then erysipelas set in, and on the morning of the 8th death resulted from blood-poisoning. His condition was not considered critical until within a few hours preceding death. The deceased was aged fifty-one, and leaves a wife and several children.

MALACHI POWELL, of Perry County, lately secured a requisition from Governor Porter for his son, John A. Powell, and Archer Dorgess, who have been arrested at Pawnee Rock, Barton County, Kas., for the theft of $1,000 in money from Mr. Powell. About $550 was recovered with the fugitives. The old gentleman, who was the sufferer by the robbery, is a comparatively poor man, this money representing nearly all his savings. His recent son is only sixteen years old.

AGUST RICHTER, the Indianapolis man who recently swapped wives with Dr. Baumbeller, the latter getting $1,000 in the trade, was thrown from his carriage by a runaway horse a few days ago and fatally injured.

JOSEPH PATASINSKI has sued several Hebrew citizens of Indianapolis, claiming $10,000, because they forwarded a letter advising against the appointment of the plaintiff as "reader" for the Hebrew congregation, advising its members to have nothing to do with him.

The field trial of farm-tillage implements, which was to have taken place at Purdue University about the second week of June, has been declared off, mainly on account of the lateness of the season, rendering it impossible to make satisfactory arrangements.

The Catholic congregation of St. Malachi's Church in Brownsburg are up in arms against the act of Bishop Chataud in excommunicating their pastor, Rev. Denis O'Donovan, and declare that they will not obey the decree posted on their church door. They say O'Donovan has been with them eleven years, an ever-faithful shepherd, and they have contributed money to prosecute the Bishop in the courts.

A Cat Attacks a Boy.

A most remarkable incident occurred on Sunday morning last at ten o'clock, on Melmore, near Howard street, which will probably result fatally to John Grace, aged 8½ years. On Saturday night a shed in the rear of Mrs. Grace's premises blew down, and a cat was caught in the debris. Little Johnnie, seeing that the poor creature was confined under one of the timbers and would probably die, attempted to release it, whereupon the animal, made almost mad by its confinement, sprang on him and tried to scratch his eyes out. Little Johnnie, although not stricken at the violence of the attack, still retained sufficient presence of mind to place his hands before his face, but in so doing had his left hand terribly lacerated. The cat then fastened its fangs in his left foot and inflicted a serious injury. One of Johnnie's companions attempted to rescue him from his perilous position, but was attacked so furiously that he was forced to retreat. He subsequently armed himself with an ax, and striking the cat, forced it to release its hold. Dr. Holt is attending the little sufferer, but is yet unable to give an opinion as to the probable result of the bites.—N. O. Times.

Singular Result of an Earthquake.

A CURIOUS result seems to have followed a recent earthquake at Bucharest. The soil of Bucharest is a rich, black, porous, vegetable mold, very springy under pressure, and carriages passing in the streets cause a strong vibration in the adjacent houses. The Grand Hotel boulevard, however, was an exception to this general rule, and in the rooms facing the principal street, on which there is a heavy traffic, no sensible effect was felt from passing vehicles. During the recent earthquake the windows and crockery in less massively constructed buildings rattled very sensibly, whereas there was no audible sound in the hotel. Since the earthquake's shock, however, this state of things has changed entirely, and every vehicle passing the hotel causes vibration in the whole building. The singular part of this change is that the effect produced by the vehicle is the same as that accompanying the earthquake. It is not a jar or previously produced in other buildings, but a sawing motion similar to that felt in the late shock. This movement is so great as to cause pictures to sway backward and forward on the walls. The hotel is one of brick, covered outside with mastic, which would show at once any crack in the walls. However, there is not a crack in it. Hence it is thought this change in the solidity of the structure appears to be due to some effect produced in the earth underneath the building by the shock of earthquake.

A Touching Incident of the Frontier.

THE miner, Anderson, of whose death in Summit notice was made last week, had a romantic trip from Summit to Del Norte. Fourteen men drew the body lashed to a sled to the top of the divide, and eight men came on from the divide to the toll-gate with the corpse. From the toll-gate to Del Norte the trip was made in wagons. Here is an incident of frontier life well worth pondering upon by our Eastern readers. We reprint it from the Prospector as an instance of that unflinching friendship which exists in the breasts of men whose exteriors may be rough, but whose humanity would impel them to wade through flames to pay the last tribute of respect to a fellow man. Picture the procession wading up the snow-clad mountain, silently drawing the body upon a rude vehicle. Above timber line, where silence reigns, religious, state, cold almost unendurable, those friends, state, war, wood and true, pursue their toilsome way over the snow crust, to be rewarded only by the consciousness that the remains of their comrade shall find Christian sepulture in dedicated ground. Some account of this kind, yet, doubtless, go across the sea and reach, perhaps, some cottage in Sweden, where the old parents shall read the letter, and, amid tears, thank God that in fact, in fact, America the body of their son, whose soul went out of this world from the loneliness of a cabin—for Anderson died suddenly, with no one near—was cared for and decently buried. So may it be with all of us, and not, as in many cases in these rugged mountains, where the all ingulfing avalanche sweeps the miner to sudden death, and an unknown and unknowable tomb.—Lake City (Col.) World.

A Long-Delayed Funeral.

DURING the battle at Droop Mountain, West Virginia, November 8, 1861, First Sergeant Jacob Frintz, of the Twenty-eighth Ohio, was shot through the head and instantly killed. His brother, Lew Frintz, helped to bury the body on the field, and left several distinguishing marks by which the grave could be recognized. When in 1881 the Government removed the dead from Droop Mountain to Grafton, by some oversight the body of Sergeant Frintz was overlooked, and after a continued correspondence with the authorities at Washington and at Grafton, without gaining any definite information, Mr. Lew Frintz came to the conclusion that his brother's body still rested where he had buried it, and he accordingly left for West Virginia and the old battle-field last week for the purpose of making a thorough search.

Time had so changed the face of nature that but few if any of the old landmarks were recognizable, and the search would have been fruitless but that a farmer named McCarty remembered that in mowing his corn he had found a couple of stones that he thought might be the head and foot stones of a grave. Upon digging down at the spot a body was discovered, which was identified by the hole in the skull and a few bones placed over it by the living brother as that of the gallant Sergeant, who had died in defense of his cause, and had lain so long in an unknown and unhonored grave.

After carefully disintering the remains and preparing a coffin for shipment to this city, Frintz returned yesterday to arrange for a fitting funeral.—Cincinnati Commercial, May 5.

A Desperate Struggle With a Mad Dog.

The northern section of this city was thrown into the wildest state of excitement by the terrible attack on a number of persons by an infuriated bull-dog suffering with hydrophobia. For some time past Mr. James M. Epply, who resides on the northern boundary of the city, has been the owner of two of these dangerous beasts, and has kept them confined in the rear yard attached to his residence. On Saturday afternoon one of the dogs ferociously attacked a child, and while they were engaged in a desperate fight, a colored girl belonging to the house went to the back door to endeavor to separate them, but no sooner did she make her appearance than one of them, frothing at the mouth, seized her by the left leg and tore a great piece of flesh from the calf of the limb. Stricken with terror and pain, the girl screamed for help, and Mr. William Thompson, who was passing at the time, came to her assistance and fired at the animal through the fence with his revolver. The ball passed through the dog's head, and he fell away from the animal, but not until his coat and shirt were torn from him and he was severely bitten in the throat and face. The dog then ran down the street toward Maryland avenue, and his next victim was a child named Eddie Simm, son of one of our leading dry-goods merchants. Tossing at the boy, the dog threw him down and bit and tore the flesh from a dozen parts of his body. Fainting and bleeding, the child was picked up and carried to his father's residence close by. A crowd had by this time gathered in front of the house, but he was not finally disposed of, although a dozen shots were fired at him, several of which wounded him, until he had severely bitten and scratched a number of persons. The distance of five or six squares from where the infuriated beast had started on his blood-thirsty flight.—Baltimore (Md.) May 5, Special to Chicago Tribune.

A mission service beginning tomorrow and continuing several days, will be held at St. Pauls Church this city, conducted by Father Darnall and Fathers of the Society of Jesus.

Rev. Stephen G. Burton, late of Texas, now sojourning in Greencastle, will preach at the Presbyterian Church by special request, next Sabbath, May 15, at 10:30 o'clock. All are invited to attend.

Our venerable fellow-citizen, Uncle Phil Carpenter, the paternal ancestor of Carpentersville, and a resident of that vicinity for almost half a century, was in this city, Thursday last attending Court.

The new city council is now ready for work. Suppose the first step taken should be in the right direction, and that is to order the necessary street repairs, before our highways become entirely impassable.

Z. T. Young, a brakeman on the I. & St. L. R. R. had his hand crushed severely, at Carbon Wednesday. Dr. Evans, of this city, amputated one finger, dressed the wounds, and Young went to Indianapolis.

The new council can glorify itself by pruning off that ornamental branch of the city service called the Board of Health—the service to be performed, if any, can be delegated to the Street Commissioner, City Marshal or Mayor.

A complete "clearance" of the jail was effected on Friday of last week, by the transportation of the five tramps to Jeffersonville, under convoy of Sheriff Brandon, his son Dick and Dick Gillespey. The boys took in Louisville before returning.

Charles F. Hunt, a graduate of Asbury University, class '75, and well known here, died at the Bates House, Indianapolis, last Monday afternoon, of congestion of the brain. The remains were interred at Amo, Ind., on Wednesday last, with Masonic honors.

Last Wednesday night about 12 o'clock, a stable on the lot belonging to the estate of Judge Turman, deceased, near Gillespie's orchard, was discovered on fire. The department turned out and extinguished the flames before the building was entirely destroyed. The building was undoubtedly set on fire.

The Seventeenth Indiana State Union Sunday-school Convention will be held at Trinity Church, Evansville, Ind., commencing May 21, and continuing three days. The programme is lengthy and entertaining. Mrs. Mary Husher, of this city, is to conduct a "Primary Teachers' Institute" on the second day. Fare for round trip from Greencastle, $4.50.

On Thursday, in Washington township, as the workmen were adjusting one of the large timbers on a bridge being built over Eel River, it fell crushing the scaffold upon which Messrs. Mace, Johnson and Nicholas were at work, hurling to them ground some 25 feet below. It was thought that they sustained serious injuries, but all are convalescent now.

On the evening of Wednesday, May 18, at 7:30 o'clock, the members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Locust St. M. E. Church will hold their quarterly meeting at the residence of Mrs. Col. Morrison, on Crown St. This meeting, which will take the place of the "tea drinking" heretofore announced, will consist of literary exercises, to be followed by a church social.

Another case of almost criminal carelessness in the use of fire-arms occurred in the western part of the city on Saturday morning of last week. A 2 oz. minie ball, coming from a southwesterly direction, perforated the residence of Mr. John Eads, passing through two thicknesses of weatherboarding and a lath, entering the sitting-room about 2½ feet from the floor. No one passed in the pathway of the projectile outside, or the consequences would have been fatal. The ball is supposed to have been projected by students testing their marksmanship over in Gillespie's woods.

Mrs. Bradshaw, widow of Alexander Bradshaw, late of Clinton township, deceased, died on Thursday last.

On Tuesday next Mrs. Will E. Stevenson, starts east, and will visit Wheeling, W. V., Boston, and the Seashore before returning.

The recent town election at Cloverdale resulted in the choice of the following officers: Trustees: T. Allen, M. C. Bridges and W. F. Poynter; Clerk and Treasurer M. T. Flannery; Marshal, D. E. Stillwell. On the night following the election the Old Board of Trustees met and declared it unconstitutional and void. The Herald says: It seems that the election board was not sworn in, and also that several votes were cast when the parties had not been here the required length of time. After the business of the meeting Dr. Prichard tendered his resignation, which was accepted, and Wes O'Daniel appointed and sworn in, thus making the board Republican. The clerk will not honor any orders until some understanding is arrived at.

Orange Blossoms.

Last Wednesday evening, at the residence of the bride's parents, Miss Jennie Williams, only daughter of Mr. Robert Williams, was married to Mr. Benj. F. Durham, of this city, Elder O. P. Badger pronouncing the ceremony. But a few intimate friends and relatives attended the wedding.

Thursday evening a select company attended the reception given the happy couple by Mrs. Rachael Durham, and enjoyed the occasion only as people can who are handsomely entertained. The bride received many handsome and elegant presents, some of them exceptionally fine. The STAR extends congratulations, with the wish that their pathway through life may be pleasant and happy, with no storms save those light ones always followed by the sunshine of happiness in its brightest form.

EPITOME OF THE WEEK.

Interesting News Compilation.

From Washington.

The President on the 5th nominated George P. Pomeroy, of New Jersey, for Secretary of the American Legation at Paris. He withdrew the nominations of Stewart L. Woodford, Asa W. Tenney, Lewis F. Payne, Clinton D. McDougall and John Tyler to Federal offices in the State of New York. This latter action caused considerable excitement, it being understood that these withdrawals were made as a retaliation upon Senator Conkling for his well-known opposition to the nomination of Judge Robertson.

UNITED STATES SENATOR DAWES on the 5th telegraphed to a New England paper denying that he, or any committee of which he was a member, had advised the President to withdraw the nomination of Judge Robertson, or recommended to him or to the caucus that action on the nomination be postponed until another session.

An order was prepared on the 6th restoring the Military Divisions to the same status as before the order of December 18, 1880, which created the Division of the Gulf. By the new order General Schofield is placed on waiting orders, with full pay. The territory formerly embraced in the Division of the Gulf is restored to the Division of the Missouri, which will remain under command of Lieutenant-General Sheridan. The Divisions of the Atlantic and Pacific remain unchanged, under command respectively of General Hancock and General McDowell.

THE six-per-cent bonds received at the Treasury Department in Washington up to the 7th for continuance at three and a-half per cent, aggregated $102,155,750.

CENSUS statistics show that the people of the United States pay $36,250,100 for their daily newspapers.

THE President on the 9th withdrew the nomination of W. A. M. Grier, of Pennsylvania, to be Third Assistant Postmaster-General, Mr. Grier having declined the position.

A CIRCULAR has recently been issued by the Chairman of the Republican National Committee, inviting expressions of opinion from Republicans throughout the country in regard to the best methods or rules which should be adopted for electing delegates to the next National Convention in 1884.

ON the 10th the Post-office Department issued orders to discontinue the steamboat mail service on four routes in the South and Southwest. It was stated that four other routes would be discontinued after the 1st of August.

ON the 9th and 10th the Republican members of the United States Senate held caucuses and generally discussed the situation of affairs relative to the confirmation of the President's nominations, etc. Much of the time on the 9th was devoted to a debate upon the policy of continuing the fight for the election of Gorham and Riddleberger. It is said that some Senators opposed the policy of renewing the contest. Mr. Conkling, in a speech of over an hour, stated his objections to Robertson, admitted that Arthur and Platt carried his ultimatum to the President, and appealed to the Republicans to sustain him. A resolution was adopted on the 10th that all untested nominations should be acted upon first, and another caucus should be held to determine the action in the contested cases.

ON the 10th the Secretary of the Treasury directed that six-per-cent bonds be received at the London agency for continuance at three and one-half per cent, until May 20.

U. S. Senate Proceedings.

THURSDAY, May 5.—Immediately after the reading of the journal an executive session was held, and a large amount of business was transacted. The Chinese treaties were both ratified, and also the extradition treaty with the United States of Colombia, the consular convention with Italy, the convention with Morocco respecting the taxation prerogatives of the Moorish Government, and the treaty with Japan relative to shipwrecks. Final action was taken on eighty-four nominations. A message was received from the President withdrawing the following nominations to Federal offices in New York State: Stewart L. Woodford, for United States Attorney for the Southern District; Asa W. Tenney, United States Attorney for the Eastern District; Lewis F. Payne, United States Marshal for the Southern District; Clinton D. McDougall, United States Marshal for the Northern District, and John Tyler, Collector of Customs for the District of Buffalo.

FRIDAY, May 6.—Mr. Dawes made an attempt to secure action on the resolution for the election of Senate officers, but the Democratic Senators resumed their tactics of alternating motions to go into executive session and to adjourn, until Mr. Dawes gave up the fight for the day, and, upon his motion, an executive session was held. When the doors were re-opened an adjournment to the 9th was effected.

MONDAY, May 9.—Mr. Kellogg offered a resolution, which was objected to and laid over under the rules, calling for the names of all clerks or employees in the several departments of the Government, together with the date of their appointment, the State to which each is charged, and the person on whose recommendation each was appointed. An executive session was held and several minor appointments were confirmed. An adverse report was made on the nomination of Stanley Matthews for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

THE STAR.

THE RAILROAD MEETING.
Wind Work of Last Saturday.

The adjourned meeting in the interest of the Greencastle, Eel River and Vincennes railroad, was held at the Court House, Saturday, as per announcement.
The attendance of substantial tax-payers
was quite large, and considerable interest was manifested. Hon. A. D. Hamrick presided. On behalf of the committee appointed, Col. W. Bosson presented the following report:

At a meeting of the citizens of Greencastle, convened on the 23d day of April,
to meet with the President and directors of the G. C. E. R. & V. R. R., the undersigned were appointed a committee to investigate into the matter and merits of the proposed road, and report what action it became Greencastle township to take with reference to the proposed railroad. Your committee regard the proposed improvement as of incalculable interest and value to the country through which the line of the road will run, opening up, as it will, the most important collateral formation of the State, developing a rich agricultural and mineral region, now isolated and embarrassed for the want of convenient, speedy and cheap outlets.
Railroads are a necessity to the social,
commercial and political interests of the country, and cannot be dispensed with.
They are the great arteries through which flows vitality, growth and prosperity.
Your committee are now unable to make any recommendations for the action of this meeting, for the want of material data touching the practicability and other interests of the road in which Greencastle would have special interest. We are advised that a preliminary survey of the line of the road will soon be entered on. The committee recommends an increase in its members, that all parts of the township may be represented to further consider the proposed enterprise,
and to report to a future meeting.

(Signed.) Bosson,
Hammond,
Fisk,
Hays.

Short and pointed speeches were made
by J. W. Cole, Esq., Capt. J. J. Smiley, Hon. S. F. Lockridge and Judge Brown, the tenor being generally favorable to the project. Judge Brown, however, made the points most generally endorsed by our citizens, to-wit: That Greencastle township was undoubtedly in favor of the line; that there could be no reasonable doubt that the proposed road would pay handsomely, as there was a large scope of undeveloped rich agricultural and mineral wealth along the entire line;
but there was one other consideration of more interest than all others to our people, and that was, will a $60,000 investment therein by Greencastle township pay the investors? Simply securing for us the northeastern terminus of the road could hardly be called full and fair equivalent. However, if the company would locate its shops here, there could be no question as to the local benefit to be derived. The speaker further said that it was pleasing and tickled our vanity
to hear the President of the road say that Greencastle was a pleasant, prosperous and an enterprising city; that he would like to do all for it he could; that in all probability the shops of the company would be located here, etc.; but such talk was not binding or substantial, and would not do to build upon. If the President and directors would agree to and give bond for the building and maintenance of the shops here, there could be no doubt that our people would vote
"aye" when the proposed tax was placed before them for action.

These remarks brought Col. Thompson, President of the road, to his feet, with outward indications that he was warm. He reiterated his proposition that $60,000 and was donated, the road
could be built, otherwise it would not;
that the subject of the location of shops
was yet undecided, and had not been considered.

Mr. Russell, a director of the company,
also talked to those assembled, detailing the benefits to accrue to this city in the event that the road be built.

Upon motion, the report above printed was unanimously adopted, and the following additions were made to the committee: Messrs. Andrew Lockridge,
William Bridges, Granville Peck, Moses
Lewman and W. W. Allen.

Adjournment was then had to meet on all of the chairman.

Ex-Soldiers and the Homestead Laws.

I TAKE the liberty of sending you the following, believing that the information therein contained will prove of great value to ex-soldiers who have heretofore made homestead
entries or who may contemplate such action,
and should be widely disseminated.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office was asked: "Whether, after a soldier has in person or by agent made an entry for a certain quarter section he may assign his interest therein to another before he has commenced
his residence on and improvement of the land?"
The answer was: "If the soldier should so vacate his entry or fail to appear within six months,
could he at some future time enter upon other land?"

The following is a copy of the response
made by the Commissioner:

"In reply I have to inform you that a soldier cannot make an original homestead entry
by attorney or agent. He may file a homestead declaratory statement by agent (Revised Statutes Sec. 2306) prior to June 22, 1874, for less than 160 acres, he may make an additional entry (Revised Statutes Sec. 2306) for such quantity of land as may be necessary to aggregate with his original homestead 160 acres, and this additional entry may be located by an agent duly authorized by power of attorney, and the party is not required to reside upon or improve the land embraced in such additional entry, provided that he shall comply with all legal requirements respecting his original entry. In the event that the original entry of a soldier made prior to June 22, 1874, has been canceled or any portion thereof of land embraced in such entry being less than 160 acres—the party's right to an additional entry still exists, but he will be required to reside upon and improve the land embraced in his additional entry the same as though the original entry had not been initiated.

"A soldier within the meaning of this letter is a person who served during the war of the rebellion for ninety days or more in the army of the United States, and who was honorably discharged therefrom. The same privileges are extended to persons who served in the navy or marine corps and received honorable discharges.

"Any person, soldier or citizen, who should make an original homestead entry under existing law and fail to comply with legal requirements respecting residence and improvements will,
upon the cancellation of his entry, be liable for the cost of such failure, forfeit all rights under the Homestead Laws, and cannot thereafter
make a homestead entry.

"The filing of a homestead declaratory
statement under section 2306 Revised Statutes secures to the party a preference right to make a homestead entry for the land filed upon with the Commissioner of the General Land Office, should a party who had made such a filing fail to make a homestead entry for the land filed upon, such failure would not operate to cancel his entry, but he would be liable for the same as though he had failed to make a homestead entry, and he may be liable for the same as though he had failed to make a homestead entry, and he may be liable for the same as though he had failed to make a homestead entry, and he may be liable for the same as though he had failed to make a homestead entry,

THE BEST REMEDY

FOR
Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

AYER'S
CHERRY

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so generally trusted by the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cure, and is equally adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergymen's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment, and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

ALecture to YOUNG MEN

On the Loss of

MANHOOD

A Lecture of the Nature, Treatment, radical cure of Self-Abuse, or Spermatorrhea, induced by Self-Abuse, Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, etc.—by ROBERT J. C. LIVERWELL, M. D., author of the "Green Book," &c.

The author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without dangerous surgery, cal operations, blisters, instruments, rings, or cordials; pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.
Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, post-paid, on receipt of six cents or two postage stamps. We have also a sure cure for Luha Worms.

THE THORN.

It was morning in the garden,
Life stirred among the trees,
Where low love whispers answered
To the wooing of the breeze.

And the birds were singing matins,
Not a voice was out of tune,
And the dew lay on the roses
That crowned the month of June.

And away there in the distance
Shone a vision of the sea,
And I plucked a rose for Molly
And she crossed the lawn to me.

O the glory of the sunshine!
O the murmur of the lilies!
As we stood there once, together
In the morning of our lives.

And the subtle, saintly fragrance
Possessed me unawares,
That floats about a maiden
Just risen from her prayers.

And the parrot bowed his top-knot
To her finger, from the perch,
As she softly hummed the hymn tune
We had sung last night at church.

Then half ashamed, I muttered,
"Here's a rose for you, but see,
Don't in a clumsy finger
The thorn remains with me!"

Straight from her housewife daintily,
She brought a needle bright,
And sought the cruel mischief out,
With skillful finger light.

O Molly, still I see you,
As you there beside me stood,
In girlish, simple beauty,
God knows that you were good.

And I hear you softly saying,
"Do I hurt you? does it smart?"
And I could not make an answer
For the beating of my heart.

The silent hills stood watching us
That sunny, summer morn,
When from my aching finger
You drew away the thorn.

Ah! little witch, you haunted me
Thro' many a lonesome day,
When I wandered from your garden
With pilgrim feet away.

And by and by, in evil hour,
I asked you once again,
To pluck a thorn from out my heart,
And ease my bosom's pain.

And you would not, or you could not,
But you turned with tears away,
And the dream of maidhood faded
For ever and for aye.

The time of flowers is over,
The rain falls cold and chill,
The mist comes creeping sadly,
O'er every sunlit hill.

Yet I can suffer for your sake,
Since better may not be,
If you may keep the rose, dear,
The thorn may bide with me.

HANNAH AND I.

My father had moved into a new place. Prospectively, I enjoyed much in the detraction of our household gods and the reduction of all our worldly goods to a state of chaos. I foresaw the delicious suspense, anxiety and final dismay or rejoicing that would attend the transit of our looking-glasses and parlor chairs. I looked forward to a kind of nomadic existence about the house during the days wherein we were getting settled, to the exploration of unknown depths under the closet-stairs and of mysterious recesses behind the chimney. I expected to sit and sing in the best rocking-chair, to roll my tired limbs on the best mattress, and to take my dinner with a large spoon from out a fruit-jar.

When, therefore, I rode up from the depot on top of the box containing my mother's best china and glass-ware, I felt that every one who beheld, also envied. The short ends of my hat-band fluttered spiritedly in the March breeze, and the anticipatory tremors in my breast creaked the starched shirt-front beneath my jacket.

At a very tender age we realize that this is a world of disappointments. For the next few days my life consisted mainly in hunting up the hammer, running for nails, trotting up to the store and down to the tinner's, and after the carpenter, pushing stove-legs into place, holding up foot-boards of family bedsteads, lifting the corners of bureaus, waiting upon the painter and the white-wash man, getting my fingers pinched, getting scolded, getting a cold, losing my handkerchief, having nothing in particular to eat, save a little baker's bread and now and then a bit of beef-steak, looked sometimes by my mother, sometimes by my father, sometimes by Mary Sullivan, and occasionally by all three.

By the third day I began to see that the anarchic style of housekeeping has its disadvantages, and to feel that the springs of a naturally good constitution were wearing out in the family service. On the morning of that day I left my mother and Mary Sullivan stretching a carpet fitted for a room fifteen by fifteen to cover our new dining-room fifteen by sixteen, and walked out in the yard to take the air.

As I sauntered down to the front gate my eyes were greeted by a vision of youth—I cannot say of beauty—swinging upon the gate over the way.

The "vision" wore a large bombazine hood, such as was at this time in high repute among grandmothers, but was never calculated to enhance the charms of the youth. A little plaid shawl was pinned askew about her shoulders. One of a species of embroidered pantalettes, which like the dodo of Mauritius, has since become extinct, had slipped down and lay like a wrinkled bandage, along with her garter, around the top of her shoe.

"Hallo!" said I.

"Hallo!" responded she; "you're a mean, nasty boy!"

I should have promptly returned this compliment but for the consideration that I had just moved into the community and everything depended upon my acquiring a good reputation. Without replying, therefore, I began reflectively digging a hole in the gate-post with my jack-knife. The "vision" swung back and forth, and hummed "I want to be an angel." In giving an unusually vigorous lurch outward an apple flew from her hand and fell into the middle of the muddy street.

I digress here to state that, though a popular street, that portion of it in front of my father's house generally was muddy. During the spring and fall months we had a large, swashy pool there—one that appeared to flow from a secret perennial source of mudiness. In the winter months it froze over and made capricious skating. During the summer it gradually dried away until, at the "pollywog" season, when alone a boy can take the highest rational enjoyment in a mud-puddle, only a damp spot in the center of the street indicated the place from which the water had subsided. It was now at high tide, and the apple fell into the ooze just below it.

"Boy, come over and pick up my apple," commanded my neighbor.

Conscious of setting that young pagan an example of good manners, I returned the apple with a bow my mother had taught me. She gave it two or three cleansing dashes on her dress skirt and then said:

"Lend me your knife and I'll give you half."

She set the apple upon top of the gate-post, savagely jammed the knife through it, wiped the blade on her shawl, and returned the knife with the larger part of the apple.

"Thank you," said I.

"What is your name, boy?"

"George Harriman. What is yours?"

"Hannah Ann Farley. You going to live in that house?"

"I expect to."

"I'm glad of it. There's been a disagreeable, stuck-up little girl living over there. I thought, when first I saw you, you were going to be just like her."

This looked as Hannah's apology for her reception. It was satisfactory, and we might then and there have become friends, but at that moment Mary Sullivan came to our front door and called me home. She said the brass-headed tacks were all gone and I must go to the store for more. When I returned Hannah Ann was nowhere to be seen.

The next morning I was fortunate enough to find a five-cent piece in a crack of a bureau drawer, and promptly started for a store wherein to spend it. The streets were so muddy I thought I would go across and leap the fences. I was in neighbor Farley's yard when I was sharply hailed from a little window high up in the end of the house.

"Boy, come up here!"

"How am I going to get up?"

"Go around to the kitchen and ask my mother to show you the way."

I hunted up the kitchen and found Hannah's mother. Prior to this time when I wished to represent a female figure upon my slate I had drawn a triangle surmounted by an ellipse, and this in turn finished by a small circle; hereafter, with Mrs. Farley in mind, I drew a cylindrical figure with a small circle on the upper end, and a slight depression representing the waist-line. After once seeing Mrs. Farley I could never wonder that Hannah was forever borrowing a pin to fasten something on with. There could never be a more delightful garret than Mrs. Farley's, for never could there be a woman who could excel her in the celerity with which she would use up furniture. Such a collection of mirrors with shattered glasses, bottomless chairs, dismantled bureaus and tables standing upon three legs is seldom met!

"What do you want to play?" asked Hannah.

"Pirate."

"What's a pirate?"

I explained, and Hannah forthwith became the most blood-thirsty of pirates. It was in my heart to spare the women and children; but she refused to listen to such a proposition, and felled her victims left and right without regard to age or sex. Once she pierced me through the heart and I fell bleeding, dying, hitting my head against the chimney, and yelling out in unfeigned agony.

Afterward, we were riding peacefully along over the green fields, and beneath the calm blue sky, on a two-legged and very dusty sofa, when a party of brigands swooped down upon us and bore us off to a loathsome dungeon behind a dismantled bureau. We flattened ourselves and crawled out, beheld the brigands, appropriated their spoils and returned triumphant to our own homes. We were very dusty and covered with cobwebs when I remembered my five-cent piece and said I must go.

"Give me half of what you're going to buy and I'll go with you," said Hannah.

I couldn't very well refuse this generous offer; so she put on her hood and shawl, at my suggestion tied up her shoe-strings, and we started. She expressed a preference for black licorice and I expended my money upon that luxury and shared it liberally. We came home hand in hand, and though Hannah went over-shoe in mud and water three times, she bore it with inimitable good nature.

From that morning our friendship matured rapidly. Sometimes Hannah was at our house; sometimes I played in the Farley garret; and sometimes when she had a sore throat and wore a preparation of lard and camphor-gum around it, we had permission to play in Mrs. Farley's parlor. Whenever Hannah stole cookies and ginger-snaps for herself, she always laid in for me; when Mary Sullivan made tea-saucer pies for me I carried them red-hot from the oven to neighbor Farley's, and Hannah and I watched them cool with hearts that beat as one. Then while one-half the juice drizzled over my jacket the corresponding half dripped on Hannah's apron. Hannah was passionately fond of "jooce!"

When school opened, Hannah and I went hand in hand and stood by one another in days of adversity as well as days of prosperity. Hannah being a miserable scholar, her days were mostly of adversity.

The months slipped away, and the years grew apace. My father petitioned the town authorities to fill up that mud-puddle in front of our house. The town authorities gave every encouragement that the "whole board" would be on the spot at an early day, but we looked for them in vain. My father made a second and third importunity with like results. Then he pressed his grievance upon their attention as gentlemen and men of honor. As gentlemen and men of honor they gave their word that the matter should be neglected no longer. We lived upon that promise six months. Then my father, grown irate, threatened to sue. The board, becoming defiant, just wished he would sue; they should like to see him sue. At this resort my father's feelings rose to the summit of moral indignation; he wouldn't sue; he scorned to lower himself to a quarrel with such men; but he would pay no more taxes in that town; and energetic preparations for our removal began.

Hannah and I were sitting upon the edge of Mr. Farley's coal-bin when I communicated to her my father's decision. As soon as she saw I was in earnest she dropped over upon the an-thracite and gave vent to a flood of tears. She declared that she couldn't and wouldn't leave me go. She should die with loneliness and she wished she was dead. A few tears of mine drizzled over into the bin and mingled with Hannah's. Afterward she appeared reconciled, and manifested intense interest in our preparations obtruding her services at our house until my mother declared she should never be ready to go if that Farley girl couldn't be kept at home.

The morning of our departure dawned at last. My father and mother went to the depot, leaving me to follow, as I had come, on the last load of goods.

It was an April morning succeeding a heavy rain-storm, and the waves of my father's mud-puddle ran high. Hannah sat upon the old petunia mound by the gate, sobbing. I raised her drooping form to bid her farewell, pushed the hair from her face and gave her my last kiss. She clutched frantically at my jacket, but, realizing that delays are dangerous, I sprang upon a dry-goods box in the wagon. The horse, most severely afflicted with spring-halt, set off at a fearful gallop, and we disappeared around the corner forever.

As soon as circumstances would permit I addressed a letter to Hannah, and soon received a reply, of which the following is a verbatim copy:

My Dear George:—

I now set down to let you know how I am. I have had a sore throat nearly all the time since we parted. I have had a cold, and school commences next week. I am tired. A new family has moved into your house, there is too boys, Edly and Willy. If we never see each other again on earth, I hope we may meet in heaven. Yours Truly,

HANNAH A. FARLEY.

The letter also contained two blots and a grease spot and was directed by Hannah's mother, wrong side up with care. I wrote her once more but received no answer, a failure which I attributed to her aversion to all literary labor rather than to any diminution in the ardor of her affections.

I attended school for the next three or four years, and then entered the wholesale mercantile business in the service of an uncle. I became a rising young man. Some of the time I rose rapidly, as gaseous matter and young men between the ages of sixteen and twenty-five are in the habit of doing. Our family also prospered. From three in our parlor we passed by easy stages through body Brussels to English Wilton, and we numbered the successors of Mary Sullivan by twos and by threes.

Presently I arrived at that age whereat extremely witty people begin pointing at a young man peculiarly sharp and original jests concerning the subject of matrimony. At first the implication therein conveyed that I had only to choose was gratifying to my vanity; but by the time I began to direct any serious thoughts that way myself, so much solid wit had become an insufferable bore. There were girls in large quantities and excellent qualities all around me, but the thought of advancing to anything serious with any one of them always suggested Hannah.

My reminiscences of Hannah were not such that I could create an ideal feminine character of her; but when a fellow has sat in a coal bin with a girl and taken alternate sucks on as many Jackson-balls as I had with Hannah, no subsequent experience can ever entirely efface the impression. I had a curiosity to know what Hannah had become. The surest way to satisfy this curiosity seemed to be to go and see her. I accordingly went.

The girl was pretty. She had color and frankness; she had grace and repose of manner. Her finger-nails were scrupulously kept, root and crown, and her hair was glossy, as well as fashionably dressed.

The year we left town Hannah's mother died; and after the billows of affliction had surged over his soul about six months, Mr. Farley again beheld the sun and took a new wife. The new wife had taken infinite pains with her step-daughter. The step-daughter's present appearance, as compared with her former condition, bore favorable testimony for the lady's system. Hannah said that when we were children I had seemed like a brother to her, and I at once placed myself upon a fraternal standing. I interrogated her in regard to the occupants of my old home, and she finally confided to me that she was engaged to the younger Wetherbee, the "wily" of her letter.

I afterward saw him, and could but inwardly applaud the discrimination that led her, even in childhood, to begin his name with a small letter. He was an individual of from 110 to 115 pounds weight, though what there was of him was drawn out and judiciously distributed with a view to making the most of straitened circumstances. There may be no more ink in an exclamation point than in a vowel, but it is better adapted to attract attention. As to color, energy and vivacity, Hannah had enough to supply three just like him. Hannah's I soon perceived, was the philosophical form of engaged life. One evening when we went to walk, she said to me:

"Mr. Wetherbee has his faults; no one knows them better than I. But where," added she touchingly, "where will you find a man who hasn't faults?"

"Where, surely?" responded I.

"I don't look for perfect happiness here below," continued Hannah pensively; "I've seen too much of life for that."—Hannah is some years my junior and must, at this period, have arrived at the mature age of nineteen years.

I returned home, and two years slipped away. I was still halting between two opinions and looking inquiringly at the third, and the "opinions" had begun to manifest lively symptoms of taking care of themselves, when one day in a neighboring city, strolling through a paper box factory whose proprietor was my friend, I came across Hannah.

"How in the world came you here?" blurted ejaculated I.

"By the fortunes of life, and the railway."

I didn't know whether she was to be addressed as Farley or Wetherbee, and observing that she was dressed in deep mourning, avoided anything that might suggest explanations. She presently told me that her father was dead. Then as I sought her confidence—on the fraternal basis—she told me that her father had left his estate encumbered.

"Those disagreeable Weatherbees hold a mortgage on the house," said she, "and they are just the exacting, unaccommodating kind of people who wouldn't hesitate in foreclosing the day the time expires!"

She had set herself about earning money to pay the indebtedness.

"You see," said she, "the property is left by will to mamma and myself conjointly. If it is disposed of at a forced sale it must be at a great sacrifice and then poor mamma will be left without a home. She has done everything for me"—here Hannah's large eyes filled with tears—"and it is a small thing for me to try to save the home for her."

I said I wondered she hadn't sought a different kind of employment and suggested teaching.

"O, I've tried applying for schools. Two or three times I've received invitations to examinations, and they've given me perfectly dreadful lists of questions—asked reasons why we performed operations that I never before knew we did perform."

"Music, then."

"I love music; but there are three teachers to every pupil. This is pleasant work and I am happy in feeling I shall save the home for mamma!"

When I reached home that evening I sold an opera ticket I had purchased in the morning, and whereas I had always smoked fifteen-cent cigars, now purchased a box at ten cents (I gave them away before the close of the week and went back to fifteen's) and asked mother if there wasn't a place somewhere in the city where they cleansed and dressed over soiled kid gloves to look as well as new.

For the next few weeks I had considerable business in a neighboring city, and I used to transit it in season for the three o'clock train, and then conclude to wait for the express. Hannah was always in fine spirits, buoyed up by the belief that she was making sure progress in paying that debt. I should as soon thought of discharging the National obligation by peddling matches.

One warm Saturday afternoon, when I stood by her side and she leaned back fatigued, but distractingly pretty with the loose hair curling around her temples she inadvertently laid her hand on the corner of the table next me. It was growing thin and the H formed by the blue veins on the back, and which, in the days of youthful simplicity she had told me stood for Harriman, stood out with great distinctness.

I suggested being allowed to make an arrangement removing her from the necessity of liquidating those debts. She refused to listen. I pressed the matter unavailingly.

I then went to the proprietor, told him Miss Farley was an old school-mate and friend of mine, who was heroically trying to save the family residence for her step-mother, and asked him if he could not furnish her a better position; but Frank is the most obtuse of creatures. He finally asked me if she could keep books. Remembering the splurges in that youthful epistle of hers, I felt by no means confident, but said I:

"Give her the books, any way, and look to me for damages."

He found that she wrote a neat hand and had a slight inkling of double entry; but when it came to the subject of remuneration, and she asked him how much he had paid his last book-keeper, he had the stupidity to reply, "He had $800, but I shall allow you $1,200."

"Ah!" said she, "he was an old and experienced book-keeper, while I know little about it. Why under such circumstances do you increase the salary?"

Frank wouldn't have scrupled at an entire series of equivocations in his own behalf, but since only my interests were at stake, his conscience became as tender as George Washington's. He finally acknowledged that the increase was provided for by a friend.

"I shall accept the position at $800," said she, with dignity.

I went up and held a conversation with Hannah. I "reasoned" with her; "I set things in their true light;" "I made matters clear." It did seem as if she might see, but she wouldn't.

Upon the urgent and repeated invitations of my mother, she consented to spend her Sabbaths at our place. She was in the frequent receipt of letters from her step-mother, in which the most affectionate sentiments were couched in the most beautiful language, and on Sunday evenings she used to read me extracts from these letters with tears in her eyes.

The pay-day came at length whereon I was morally certain she would receive enough to complete her payments. I went to see her at her boarding-place that evening and broached the deferred subject. She attempted evasion, but I had decided that if ever I was to have my own way in this connection it was time I began. The result was I went home with her the next day.

We found Mrs. Farley had just decided to marry the former chairman of that Board of Road Commissioners who wouldn't fill up my father's mud-puddle.

"I think, Hannah," said she reflectively, "that perhaps we'd better dispose of the property and take our respective portions to purchase our trousseaux with."

They did accordingly, and one "respective portion" was made up as quickly as I could spur on an able and experienced corps of dressmakers.

During the years that have elapsed since that eventful period, our domestic life has been sometimes critical and often peculiar, but always jolly. I've never seen the hour when in the inmost recesses of my heart I've regretted that my father's family once resided opposite that mud-puddle and Hannah Ann.—Elizabeth A. S. Chester, in Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

—The average novel may be described as an attempt by some match-making person with a turn for letters, to bring a nice young man in contact with a nice young woman, and after spinning out the story of their embarrasments to conventional three-volume length, to hand them over in bridal array to a sort of clergyman, to the end that he may celebrate between them the sacrament of holy matrimony, after which, they have ceased to be heroic or interesting, they are conducted to their new and happy home, and we bid them farewell forever.

LOCAL LEMES.

- Go to church to-morrow.
- E. D. Anderson is convalescent.
- The war of "the roses" still goes on.
- Hammocks appear with the leaves.
- It is fashionable for ladies to embroider their own stockings.
- The heavy-hoofed fly now gambols on the heads of the bald.
- Wool is quoted in this market at from 18 to 22 cts. per pound.
- Mr. H. Landes is improving his North Indiana street residence.
- Pat. Halloran, a former typo of this city, is here from Cincinnati visiting.
- Mr. R. H. Bowen, of Putnamville, has opened up a new store at Needmore, Ind.
- Hon. W. G. Neff is out again after several weeks confinement by sickness.
- Mr. Samuel Catherwood has sufficiently recovered from sickness to resume his Railroad duties again.
- Messrs. Jerome Allen and Thos. C. Hammond have been appointed executors of the will of F. E. McLean, deceased.
- Rev. G. W. Bainum, of Streator, Ill., called to this city by the Presbyterian congregation, will preach here one week from to-morrow, at which time the question as to his acceptance will, perhaps, be definitely settled.

As a matter of economy it is more essential that you should buy good shoes for your children than for yourselves. Cheap shoes may, with proper care, answer as a substitute with older persons, but it is money thrown away to buy them for children. The best you can get will not last them any too long. At Christie's Shoe Store, on the north side of Washington street, you will find the best custom made shoes that this country affords. Take your children with you when it is possible; you will always get a better fit and save trouble. For the best wearing and neatest fitting goods, go to Christie's Shoe Store by all means. On the north side of Washington street, just east of the National Bank.

- Lawrence Allen has got 'em bad—the measles.
- Henry Meltzer's new fence adds to the beauty of home.
- Mr. H. C. Allen is the proud papa of a new baby boy.
- Tom Keightley, now of Johnson county, visited Greencastle Monday.
- The Woman's Reading Club meets at the residence of Mrs. Allen this afternoon.
- A special premium will be awarded at the Russellville Fair on a bicycle race. Particulars hereafter.
- Lieut. Hamilton will deliver the University lecture to-morrow at 3:15 p. m. Subject: "The moral aspect of the Profession of Arms."
- Henry Crawley, of Harmony, Ind., who was knocked down by foot-pads last February, in this city, died on Saturday last, from the effects of the wounds received at that time.
- A visit to Brattin's Jewelry house established in this city over twenty years ago, always leads to pleasant reveries. The grand display of fine watches, diamonds jewelry of every description, solid silver and plated ware, is well worthy of examination, as it embraces an innumerable list of articles, from the most chaste and expensive kind of jewelry to thin plainer articles of plated ware, so that the tastes of pocket-book of all may be accommodated. He also carries in stock a large assortment of French clocks, designed in bronze, marble, brass etc., and a line of gold pens and pencils, gold headed canes, etc., and sells on a direct guarantee that goods are just as represented.
- Toilet articles, perfumery, etc., a fine stock at Landes' drug store.

The new council inaugurated a change. Now the question to be solved is, "will it be for the better."

And Still Another Veteran Gone.

Andrew T. McCoy, of Cloverdale, departed this life at the residence of his friend and brother, David Rule, on the 10th day of May, 1881, after a severe affliction of one week and two days. The disease was pneumonia.

Brother McCoy was born in the county of Nicholas, State of Kentucky, in 1831. He moved to this county in 1833. Became a Christian in 1831, and maintained a consistent life to the end. On a visit to his neighbor Rule, he retired after supper in apparently good health, but during the night was suddenly attacked, and steadily sank, in spite of the tender attentions of physician and friends, until death came to set the spirit free.

His funeral was preached in the Christian Church in Cloverdale, where he had so often went to worship God, by Elder O. P. Badger, to immense concourse of relatives, friends and brethren, on the 11th inst, at 2 o'clock p. m. He was at the time of his death, and had been for a long time, Chaplain of the Cloverdale Lodge of F. & A. M., with which fraternity he became identified some 25 years since.

An Old Citizen of Greencastle Playing it Fine.

The Indianapolis Sentinel of Tuesday says: The readers of the Sentinel will doubtless remember that about two years ago one John Hensley recovered judgment against the city for $1,500 for alleged injuries sustained by his falling into one of the city's wells. Hensley, not many months since, filed a similar suit in the Courts of Chicago against that city. He, it seems from the suit there, had also fallen in a well in that city, and recovered judgment against the city of Chicago for $2,500. The city of Chicago has moved for a new trial, and, that it may sustain its motion, has sent to this city for a transcript of the record in the case against this city. The authorities of Chicago claim that Hensley's fall was not accidental, and will attempt to prove the matter in the Courts there. There were two Chicago detectives in the city yesterday procuring the transcript from the Clerk of the Superior and Circuit Courts, and at the same time on the look-out for Hensley, who is now believed to be in this city. If the theory advanced by the Chicago authorities can be proven, it may be possible that Hensley will find it difficult to collect the $2,500 judgment from the Windy City. Hensley is said to be a carpenter by trade, and is supposed to now live near Augusta Station, in this County.
